PERFECTLY PARALYZING.

The Intellectual Conversation Between Two Glddy Young Things on the Cars. On the way to Buffalo two "young people" got on the train somewhere east of Cleveland. They were going back to school. They were not silly, ignorant country young people. By no manner of means. They represented seminary and college culture, for the young man was on his way back to Cornell. They dropped into a seat opposite the pilgrims, and they talked, and the passengers in the immediate vicinity listened to this highly intellectual interchange of pulsing thought "Say!" exclaimed the impetuous youth, "I heard something about you!" "Oh, you!" she replied; "what was it?"

"Oh, I know," he asserted; "it paralyzed me." "Well, what was it about?" "Down there at Chatauqua, that time. ![Oh, that paralyzed me. Te-he, te-he." "What," she exclaimed, in tones of intense surprise, as though it was the first time she had ever

The Copyright Question.

Earl Gran le, foreign secretary, recently addressed a dispatch to Mr. Lowell, American minister, on the subject of copyright, saying that it would be satisfactory to England if a treaty could be regotiated with America on the same basis as with other countries, namely, without any condition for the manufacture of English books in America; but if this condition is essential, England will negotiate on that basis. A treaty providing that books written by American authors in England shall be manufactured in America in order to have a copyright there would be covered by the existing act; but if it provides that books written by American authors in America shall be manufactured in England in order to have a copyright in England, such provision would require the sanction of Parliament. Mr. Lowell replied as follows: " A treaty confirmed by the Senate would be law in America. Possibly supplementary legislation would be needed to en force its provisions in detail, but I understand that this will follow as a matter of course."

A Camp-Meeting Leader.

Elder Traverse, who lately died in Buffalo, was once the most noted camp-meeting leader in Eastern New York. Of splendid physique, he made short work of interrupters. Once a notorious rough, "Chicago Bob," interrupted the congregation while singing by crowing. "Sit down, Robert," said Traverse. "Chicago Bob sits down for no one," growled the bully. "Sit down, Robert," once more said the elder. Robert's reply was a movement to throw off his coat. One under the car came defily from the elder, followed up by another, and another, and another, and Chicago Bob retired unconscious. Next day he appeared among the repentant sinners. "Are you in earnest, Robert?" mildly inquired the elder. "I am."

He picks it up and walks solemnly away, meditating on spiritual things. Before he has gone far a stranger appears and says : "Beg pardon, sir; I would like to have you loan me a dollar."
